PROTECTING JUTE

A Canadian Industry Which Requires Adequate Protection

United States manufacturers of jute yarns, bagging and twine fear that the new Democratic administration will reduce the protection which they have enjoyed. Jute is a long vegetable fibre, the cheapest commercial fibre in the world, grown exclusively in India. It is used to manufacture bags, sacks, twine, carboys, etc. The chief centres of the industry being Calcutta, Dundee, Dunkirk, Hamburg, Vienna, Turin, Brooklyn and Ludlow. The weaving of jute fabric has not yet been established as an industry in Canada, but jute yarn and fabrics are further manufactured here to such extent that Canadian concerns supply the greater part of the home market. In the United States, the spinners and weavers of jute are protected by a tariff of 45 per cent. In Canada there is practically no duty on jute yarn and plain jute cloth.

Why should not adequate protection be given to spinners and weavers of jute by Canada, so that large industries, similar to those enjoying protection of 45 per cent. or more in the United States, might be established in this country.—Industrial Canada.

CANADIAN LABOR

MUST BE PROTECTED

Otherwise It Cannot Survive the Cheap Products of Colored and Oriental Labor

The Toronto Globe quotes an authority on the Orient to show that the revolution in China has serious aspect for neighboring white races. The real Yellow Peril lies in the pressure that the millions of thrifty Chinese toilers, insured to great privation, must sooner or later exert upon economic and industrial conditions in the Western world. Their wonderful adaptability, uncomplaining patience, untiring industry, great skill as craftsmen, and remarkable capacity for passive resistance have never been equalled, by any race, unless it be the persecuted Hebrew. This economic pressure has already led Australia to guard against the menace of a yellow immigration. Its effects are apparent also in the Straits Settlements, the Dutch Indies, the treaty ports of China, and the Russian railway towns of Manchuria. In these centres the white workman has been hopelessly beaten in the stern economic struggle of life. Where the two live side by side the balance of economic power passes into the hands of the Asiatic. Within the memory of the present generation the wealth of the Straits Settlements and of Hong Kong has been transferred to the Chinese. At Harbin and Tientsin, in Chinese territory, Russian railway porters may be seen carrying the luggage of first class Chinese passengers. This is the real yellow peril—the unceasing struggle for existence of three hundred million Asiatics, who are ready to work for wages on which white men would starve. The settlement of China, therefore, is of serious concern to the white nations. How would Canadian workmen survive without tariff protection against the cheap products of colored men that thrive on a pittance which would not keep white men alive?

Owing to the dry, cold atmosphere, not a single infectious disease is known in Greenland.

INDUSTRIAL CENTRES
—RAISE FARM VALUES

The Highest Prices of Land in the United States Are in Manufacturing Districts

The Farmers' Sun of Toronto observes:

The average value of farm lands in the United States in 1910, according to the United States census, was $32.40 as against $15.17 ten years before. The highest values are mostly in some of the New England States, in the Middle West and California, where they run up to $125 per acre and over. In a large part of Texas and some of the arid States of the West, as well as in considerable portions of the Southern States, values run under $10 an acre.

The highest values are recorded in the industrial centres—in the New England States, in the rich Middle West, and California. In Texas, given over largely to ranching, with few noteworthy home markets, farm lands are scarcely more than one third of those claimed for Illinois, Iowa and other States in the "Breadbasket" of the Republic—a section that points triumphantly to its exhibit of scores of manufacturing centres. The reason for the Canadian provinces is obvious. The multiplication of industrial centres brings a corresponding rise in farm values. Eastern and western Canada are already learning this from their own experience.

FLIGHT FROM FREE TRADE

The Toronto News observes editorially:

With the approach of spring the flight from Free Trade England has begun again. Nowhere in the modern world is there so much of poverty and of misery as in the Mother Country. Great Britain alone strives to fight a protectionist world. It is a vain battle against the gods.

"Cheap labor flows in from other countries. With this comes also cheap goods from other countries. Both forces rob British workmen of employment and lower the conditions of living for great multitudes.

"What has come to pass in England under free trade some people would introduce into Canada. In vain, however, is the net spread in sight of the bird."

BY SPECIAL MESSENGER

An Errand That Had Unexpected Results.

By WARING MITCHELL.

On that certain Tuesday morning when Colonel Graves got ready to start for the city from his country place he said to his daughter Winnie:

"It is possible that I may want those Mexican bonds this afternoon, and here is the key of the safe. If I have to have them I will send you a note by a special messenger."

The colonel was something of a lawyer, speculator and broker, and Miss Winnie was his only daughter. She acted as his amanuensis at home and was pretty familiar with his business transactions. The bonds spoken of had a face value of $20,000, but of late had been rather wobbly in the market and had caused the colonel considerable anxiety. At 1 o'clock that afternoon he wanted the bonds and telephoned his daughter to that effect, saying that he would send a messenger. Instead of sending a boy from the regular service, however, he called the office of Jones next door and said:

"Jones, I want a trusty fellow to run out to my house and bring me back some bonds. Haven't I noticed a young man around here?"

"Yes, he's a nephew of mine. He's out now, but within a line and he'll be here when he returns. He ought to go out to East Park and back in an hour." The colonel wrote a line to Miss Winnie to deliver the bonds to her and then went out on the street, on business. Fifteen minutes later Jones' nephew was making for the Grand Central station as fast as the express to the subway would carry him.

Jones hadn't given the young man's biography, but it may be stated that his name was Vincent Gray, he was twenty-two, and he was in the office of his uncle to learn the devious ways of Wall street before setting up in business for himself on the comfortable fortune left him by a deceased aunt. For a young man who expected to come in contact with bulls and bears and other animals, young Gray was very trustful of human nature. For instance, while his brain was speeding with judgment, he was sure that he was hanging to a strap thinking of things financial a young man with ambitions leaned against him and picked his pocket without exciting the least suspicion.

The light fingered youth found there only a cardcase and the letter to Miss Winnie, but they were sufficient to bring about several unlooked for results. He passed into another car and opened and read the letter and he saw the golden opportunity he had been looking for. In the cardcase were two or three dollar bills. The thief had a right to infer that Vincent Gray was a man who was not content with more money about him. He likewise had a right to infer that young Gray could not produce the wherewithal to pay a ticket for the subway. The fare was only 20 cents, but without it a man is as badly off as if the sum were $5.

There was a train ready to leave. The thief bought his ticket and got aboard. Vincent Gray stood at the ticket window and fussed and fumbled and was left. His cardcase and money were gone, and when he found that the letter had also taken wings he realized that he was in trouble. He hadn't even a nickel to get back to the office. He hadn't the wherewithal to telephone to his uncle Jones in New street, and after waiting fifteen minutes trying to figure out the problem he made haste to a pawnshop, where he put down his watch for $5.

The next train to East Park was ten minutes late in starting and the same in reaching the Park, so there were in all fifty minutes lost. The young man did not suspect that he was the victim of a pickpocket, but supposed he had lost his property in the jam while boarding the car. He had the best of it that a telephone message would precede him, and he had remembered the address. Therefore he did not worry so much over the loss of the letter. It was only when he came face to face with Winnie Graves and stated his errand and saw her look of surprise and distrust that he realized the situation.

"Why, sir," she replied, "those bonds were delivered to a messenger more than half an hour ago."

"But I was sent for them and was delayed."

"If you were sent for them, you must have a line from my father."

"I had a line, but I unfortunately lost it, together with my money. My name is Vincent Gray, and I am in the office of my uncle Jones in the avenue, but with your father. I am afraid that some mean fellow found the letter and has taken advantage of it."

"And I am afraid that anotherascal is trying to do the same thing!" exclaimed Miss Winnie's aunt Ruth, who was at the head of the house and who had entered the library just in time to hear the young man's words.

"But, madam, you surely can't think that!"

"Can you think what I please, sir. Can you imagine we were idiotic enough to give up those bonds without a written order from Colonel Graves?"

"But whoever presented that order was an impostor."

"Perhaps so, and perhaps it is the impostor who is here now, Winnie. Go to the telephone and ask your father the name of the messenger he sent. He wouldn't have sent Tom, Dick or Harry in such an important errand. Young man, sit down here until I find out the truth of this matter."

The girl went to the telephone, and the young man sat down with visions of policemen and prison bars passing before his eyes. The aunt took a seat beside him in front of him and stared at him in a cold, cruel way—a way that gave him to understand that she would be no sultry man in the room to soothe his nerves. "For three or four minutes Miss Winnie returned to the room to say:

"That's always the way. Central tells me that the line into the city is crossed or something and it may be an hour or more before they find out the trouble and remedy it."

"Then I will go back and tell our father the situation," said Mr. Gray. "Some sharper has the bonds, and the police should be notified at once."

"You will sit at right here until that telephone wire is in working order!" announced Aunt Ruth. "There are men about the place, and we have dogs and guns, and if you try to run away it will be the worse for you, Winnie. I will keep him back and tell our father the situation, said Mr. Gray. "Some sharper has the bonds, and the police should be notified at once."

UNIONS IN CANADA.

Only Twelve Per Cent. of Canada's Workmen Organized.

Some of the organizations in Canada labor and its organizations in Canada are contained in the annual special report on the subject by the Department of Labor. The union membership in the last calendar year increased from 131,132 to 160,120 at the end of 1913. The statistics show that:

"It is now well understood by those interested in the subject that the great majority of unions are organized labor in Canada are affiliated with international organizations having their headquarters in the United States. The mass of membership is in all these cases south of the line, the Canadian memberships receiving generally its proportion of officials. This system of internationalism in labor organization in Canada is apparently confined to no particular class of workers, and extends throughout practically all industries; in some cases, however, the workers have favored a form of unionism independent of the international bodies and have proceeded on non-international lines."

International unions in North America number 168, and 99 have established locals in Canada. Of the latter 82 are in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. The Canadian memberships of this federation is about 30,000, or one-twentieth of the whole. The statistics show that 138,389 workers in Canada who are members of international organizations, and 1,688 local branches; this is an increase of 107 locals and 16,974 members over the corresponding figures of 1912.

Of Canadian organizations there are 217 local branches with a total membership of 168,000, an increase for the year; and in addition there are 28 independent bodies, of which 16 are affiliated with the trade union organizations of all types. In Canada at the close of the year 1913 the total membership reported for 1912 was 131,132, and in 1913, 160,120. The total number of wage-earners in Canada was estimated for the current year at 1,500,000.

With regard to the large majority of wage-earners, who are estimated to be apparently unorganized by organization and representing 88 per cent. of the total, the report is chiefly lacking in the case of unskilled labor. Farm labor and the class of workers dependent on the land, comprising about one-fourth of the total male wage-earners, and these are practically unorganized. From the statistics it is little organized in Canada. The number of women workers in 1909 was 16,400, and in 1913, 24,000. (again allowing an increase of forty per cent.) placed at 260,000 at the end of 1913. The extent of organization among women workers in Canada is not easily ascertained, but the industrial hand shows that there is little to report. Organization on the part of female workers is found chiefly in manufacturing group, in the U. S. Army, cigar makers, bookbinders, etc.

The trade union membership throughout the west aggregated 11,455,598. Germany is first, Great Britain second, United States third. The report gives a complete list of all unions in Canada and their officers.

To Help Grenfell.

A plan to set foot the formation of a better organization to support the work of Dr. T. Wilfred Grenfell and along the Labrador coast is being actively pushed forward.

The prime mover is W. R. Sterling, one of the greatest enthusiasts for the Grenfell Medical Mission. He became so interested last year that he chartered the supply ship Clewett and took a party of friends to the Labrador coast, where he delivered supplies to the various posts of the Mission. He had many pathetic stories to tell of what he saw among the natives of the barren coast.

"The isolation of the people on the coast of Labrador, their lack of education, their lack of tools, their lack of supplies or to get any distance from their own small homes, excepting at the expense of much labor and money, it seemed to me, put these people in a class by themselves," says Mr. Sterling.

A Locomotive as a Fire Engine.

It is not often that one hears of a locomotive being pushed or pulled through burning or floating ice. Then the managers with night and main work on the coast had to force their way, or the passengers, women, or children, excepted, lay hold of straps attached to the sides of the boat, and seek to draw it along. Now and then someone goes through and sets a coal fire, and it is soon fished up by his companions, who cannot afford to laugh at his misfortune, since their turn may come next.

Improving Live Stock.

In New Ontario Live Stock Improvement Association has been formed under the auspices of the Department, whereby twelve residents could be taken in the form of a one dollar each, and thus the association would be entitled to the choice of one of the best of the two breeds of any breed suited to the district.

Women's Institutes.

There are 725 branches of the Women's Institutes in more than 2,500 members in Ontario.

LAURA SECORD CENTENARY.

Story of Brave Woman Whose Fame Will Live in Canada.

Monday, June 23, was the centenary of the death of a woman that will always live in Canadian history, the accomplishment of which made possible a great Canadian victory which had its effects upon the issue of the war of 1812-14.

On June 23, 1813, Laura Secord, daughter of a United Empire Loyalist, and wife of a Canadian militiaman, who had been wounded at Queenston Heights, accidentally overheard a conversation between some American officers who had taken up their quarters in her home at Queenston, the purpose of which led her to believe that the Americans were about to attack and defeat the small British force commanded by Lieut. Fitzgibbon, at the Devil's Den.

Leaving the house, ostensibly for the purpose of milking her cow and feeding the animals before her, in a manner that gave the American soldiers the idea that she was unable to do so, she managed to pass the American pickets unmolested. Once outside the American lines, she dashed into the woods, and after a long and perilous route, through forests and swamps to Fitzgibbon's camp, she delivered the news of the Americans' presence. As a result of her heroism, Fitzgibbon, on the following day, with less than 50 men of H. M. 4th Regiment, about 15 militia and a small force of Six Nation and other Indians under Capt. Johnson Kerr and Dominique Ducharme, surprised and attacked the enemy at Beaver Dams, and after a short engagement, captured Col. Mearns of the U. S. army, his entire force of 542 men and two field pieces.

It is undoubtedly one of the most remarkable victories in our annals, and a victory, too, that helped to rid the country of U. S. invaders and maintain this country as a British land.

At the time of her act of heroism Laura Secord was a woman of 38, the mother of five children. She was a well-to-do farmer's daughter and she lived to the old age of 93.

Other acts of bravery are attributed to her, such as that of saving her husband's life, for after he was wounded, it is on record, that he would have been killed by the enemy had not his wife come to his assistance.

A monument has been erected on Lundy's Lane in memory of this heroine, on which the following inscription is inscribed:

"To perpetuate the name and fame of Laura Secord, who, on the 23rd of June, 1813, carried, alone, nearly 30 miles by a circuitous, difficult and perilous route, through woods and swamps, the news of the American attack on the British outpost at De Cew's Falls of intended attack, and thereby enabled Lieut. The Most Modest of Men
Abraham Lincoln felt deeply the responsibility that rested on him as president of the United States, but he shrank from assuming any of the honors, or even the titles of his position.

After years of intimate acquaintance, public men testified shortly after Mr. Lincoln's death that he could not recall a single instance in which he spoke of himself as president, or used that title for himself, except he acted in an official capacity.

He always spoke of his position and office, vaguely, as this place, here, or in other modest phrase. Once, speaking of the room at the Capital used by the president of the United States at the close of a session of congress, he said: That room, you know, that they call—dropping his voice and hesitating—the president's room.

To an intimate friend who addressed him always by his own proper title, he said: Now call me Lincoln, and I'll promise not to tell of the breach of etiquette—if you won't—and I shall have a resting spell from Mr. President.

All persons agree that the most marked characteristic of Mr. Lincoln's manners was his simplicity and earnestness, but his native dignity never forsook him, and with all his angularities and disregard of conventionalities distinguished foreigners were invariably impressed by his fine fiber.

For the Earache
I am afraid I have greatly interfered with my own practice, said a celebrated aurist, by giving the following advice to many of my friends: At the first symptoms of earache, let the patient lie on the bed with the painful ear uppermost. Fold a thick towel and tuck it around the neck; then with a teaspoon fill the ear with warm water. Continue doing this for fifteen or twenty minutes; the water will fill the ear orifice and flow over the head, let the warm run out, and plug the ear with warm glycerine and cotton. This may be done three or four times until relief is obtained. It is almost invariably cured, and has saved many cases of acute inflammation. The water should be quite warm, but not hot.

NERVOUS TROUBLES ON THE INCREASE

They Are Due to an Impoverished Condition of the Blood

Nervous exhaustion—or neurasthenia, as medical men call it—is one of the greatest evils of the present day, for it is destroying the life and energy of thousands of men and women, or, more correctly, it is insuring the causes of this trouble include overwork, mental strain, worry, indiscretion, and sometimes it follows a gripe. The signs of this trouble are usually great weakness after exertion, nervous headaches, trembling hands, shakiness in the legs, irritability of temper, weak digestive power, insomnia. The life of the sufferer becomes full of misery.

The true treatment for this trouble must consist of a building up process for the at-vie signs mean that the exhausted nerves are calling for more nourishment from the blood supply.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new rich blood that feeds the starved complaining nerves, and in this way they have cured thousands of times neurasthenia, neuralgia and other nervous disorders, and have restored strength and nerve-energy to despairing people.

Mrs. Isaac Wilson, Calabogie, Ont., gives thanks for having been restored to health through the use of this medicine, she says: "When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was a nervous wreck; I couldn't do my work, could not sleep at night, suffered from nervous headaches, and the least noise would completely upset me. Only those who have suffered from nervous trouble can tell what I endured. I doctored for a time, but did not get any benefit. Then I learned of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and sent for a half dozen boxes. By the time I had used these I was almost well, and a couple more boxes completely restored my health, and I have had no return of the trouble. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to those who suffer from any form of nervous trouble."

If you are weak, nervous or out of health begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from any medicine dealer or by mail at 60 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The London Daily Citizen publishes the following joke on itself: They are telling a good story about "The Daily Citizen in Fleet Street, and as this is a paper not afraid of a joke against itself I shall be forgiven for repeating it. A bricklayer in a tramcar near the Elephant and Castle was reading "The Daily Citizen, and a member of the crowd who happened to be in the car was gratified by the fact. It is pleasant to see workers reading their own paper and learning about the conditions of their fellow workers. He leaned forward and got into conversation with the bricklayer and commented on the title of the Journal he was looking at. Ay, said the loyal reader, it's not a bad paper, not half a bad paper. It would be quite bright if they didn't have all this stuff about labor in it.

The servants were abed and the doctor answered the bell himself. A colored man stood on the steps holding a large package.

Is Miss Matilda the cook at home, said the man.

Yes, but she has retired, returned the doctor.

Can I lead his fo' her, said the doctor.

Certainly, said the doctor.

He took the bundle from which flowers and buds were protruding, and after bidding the man good night, carefully carried it to the kitchen, where he deposited it, paper and all, in a pan of water.

The doctor thought nothing more of the affair until he heard Matilda's angry voice raised in conversation with the maid.

If I had dusson head, cried the cook, did put mass new spring in his ears, I'd scold 'im for sho'.

He Explains
I hear you passed my wife on the street the other day and said she was not much for looks.

Yes, I said that. You see my wife was along and she asked me if I didn't think your wife a perfect beauty. As a married man yourself, you know that was my cue to disagree.

The explanation was accepted.

Scribbler—Whatever the critics may say about my novel, they can't say I have stolen any other man's ideas.

Funny Mixups
Two of the boys were discussing lovers made by nervous or absent-minded people. Tom told one about the rattled bridegroom who asked the clergyman if it were still customary to kiss the bride when Robert recalled the story of the woman who said to the usher in the church: May I occupy this place? which so rattled the usher, who replied: No, but I'll show you to another sheet.

Tom told the story with one about the Fourth of July orator who referred to George Washington washing the Delaware. Then Robert came back with the story of the young actor who was expected in a particular play to rush on the stage with great excitement and say: The queen has swooned!

He showed the necessary excitement and called out: The queen has swooned! and then corrected himself and said: The queen has swooned, and when the audience began to laugh he tried again with: The queen has swooned, when he was dragged off by the stage manager. As he disappeared he was heard to say something for which in Queen Elizabeth's day he would have been beheaded.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

An old Scotch lady was compelled to carry an ear trumpet with her wherever she went. Upon visiting a small church in Scotland not long ago she was waited very suspiciously by the sexton until she reached her seat. Then, as if he could stand the suspicion no longer, he went over to her and shaking a warning finger emphatically, he said: Madam—one too, and you're out.

The Request
Did Baron Puchak ask you for my hand, father? asked Oventon.

No, replied Mr. Cumroo, he called to discuss a marriage settlement. He didn't ask for your hand, he asked for my pocketbook.

Irrigating the Desert
The common opinion that there is no water in the desert of Sahara is quite incorrect, for in all parts of the great desert that are inhabited there is plenty of water. The trouble is to find it, for it lies at unknown depths below the surface of the sandy waters.

It is the mission of a party of arctic well diggers operating in the south of Algeria, to discover and make use of this hidden water, and in February last one of these engineers opened a well that has claimed the world's record, having a flow of 8,000 gallons a minute.

This is in the oasis of Toiga, about 22 miles west of Blakara. The water rises in a fountain six feet high and forms a small river that will make it possible to irrigate about 6,000 acres of land.

During the past ten years wells have been bored which produced 116,000 gallons since the French have occupied the land. This is a considerable feat. It takes 1,500,000 date palms in which lies the wealth of Southern Algeria.

WERE TRIED AND STOOD THE TEST
DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MAKING A REPUTATION IN THE WEST

Saskatchewan Man Tells How They Cured Him After Four Months' Suffering from Backache and Other Forms of Kidney Disease.

St. Phillips, Sask., (Special)—In a new country where changes of climate and impure water are among the difficulties to be overcome, kidney trouble is prevalent. It is the kidneys, the organs that strain the impurities out of the blood, that first feel an undue strain on the body. Consequently, Dodd's Kidney Pills have been well tried and tested in this neighborhood.

They have stood the test. Many settlers tell of backache, rheumatism and urinary troubles cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Otto Ohtewak is one of these. In speaking of his cure he says:

"I suffered from kidney disease for four months. My back ached, I had heart flutterings, and was always tired and nervous. My skin had a harsh, dry feeling; my limbs were heavy; and I had a dragging sensation across the loins."

"I consulted a doctor, but, as I did not appear to improve, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes, and now I am all right. My kidneys are healthy and I feel like a new man."

No Use at School
Now that little George had attained the age of six, the great problem of his education became the burning question of the hour. The family declared that little George must go to school immediately.

Little George himself firmly maintained that he would do nothing of the sort, and venturously the matter was settled. The school was very much the same effect upon him as a red rag is on a bull.

However, who knew nothing of the difference of opinion in the family, ventured to remark one day: Your father tells me, George, that you are going to school next week. Then father's taking you to school, is he not, father?

Granny, I can't read and I can't write so what good should I do at school, I would like to know!

Quick-and-Frozen In

In excavating recently for the foundation of a large building in Berlin, the workmen found it necessary to go 10 feet below the foundations of the adjoining buildings. They rested on quicksand, which would have flowed from under them had the builders used an ingenious method to keep the sand from slipping away. It consisted in solidly freezing the sides of the new excavation. Five-inch freeze pipes, closed at the bottom, were sunk three feet apart all around the edges of the pit. The pipes contained one-inch pipes that were open at the bottom and connected with a supply header at the top. The freeze-pipe was connected with a drain header, the one-inch pipes, up the five-inch pipes, back into the drain header and thence to the brine tank.

Farmers Invited to Send Produce to Calgary Market.

Circular letters have been sent out by the Calgary Consumers' League to secretaries of Farmers' Unions within 150 miles of Calgary. Also to Women's Institutes of Alberta. These letters are intended to get in touch with the producer, the farmer who would likely be interested in the creation of an open market in Calgary where produce such as butter, eggs, poultry, vegetables, etc., could be sold direct to the consumer.

The letter goes on—
"As a result of strenuous work on our part we have been able to prove beyond a doubt that it is possible to establish a public market in the city, and to have the people patronize that market, even when it exists as the present one does, under what are generally conceded to be unfavourable conditions."

At the present time provision has not been made for the introduction of a system whereby the farmers at a distance can ship their goods to a responsible person or department, who would sell at a reasonable rate of commission. It is therefore necessary as a temporary arrangement, if the farmers are to take advantage of the market, that they ship co-operatively and arrange to send one of their own number with the produce and sell it themselves on the market. In our opinion the prices which can be obtained for your goods will more than pay the fare and time of the person you entrust with your goods.

We wish to emphasize the fact that we are only asking you to make arrangements of this kind for the time being, and ask you to co-operate with us by arranging in whatever way may seem most suitable to you to send your goods to the market, thus showing that you appreciate the opportunity to get in direct touch with the consumer. With your practical sympathy expressed in this manner, and with the influence we are able to bring to bear from this end, our combined efforts would undoubtedly bring about a permanent arrangement whereby you could ship your goods direct to the market and be sure of having them sold at the highest possible price and at the least cost to you, without having to undertake personal supervision yourselves.

"The Consumers' League of Calgary does not receive such shipments to sell. They are simply bringing the housekeepers to the public market to buy. For a permanent market we suggest each union plan through the winter just how they will get their produce to the local market next spring."

This is one of the first steps of the Consumers' League to carry out their aim in bringing the producer and consumer in direct contact. The league realizes that by securing the co-operation of the farmers, the men who supply the produce, that concessions from the government and railways will be more easily secured. Also the farmers themselves will benefit by this co-operation, for by sending their goods direct to the Calgary market they can receive from 4 to 10 cents a pound more by eliminating the middle man.
